

To solidify your knowledge on storm-resistant concrete homes and buildings, start here.

Ten Dates and Locations: Concrete has long been recognized as the material of choice for resisting high winds, flying debris, and storm surge associated with hurricanes and tornadoes. Now you can learn how concrete building systems can be used to build storm resistant homes and buildings by attending one of our all-day seminars:

August 22	Little Rock, Arkansas
August 24	Oklahoma City, Oklahoma
August 25	Dallas, Texas
August 29	Memphis, Tennessee
August 31	Kansas City, Missouri
September 6	Louisville, Kentucky
September 7	Indianapolis, Indiana
September 8	Columbus, Ohio
October 24	Charleston, South Carolina
October 25	Savannah, Georgia

Agenda: National and local experts will be on hand to present the following topics:

- Fortified for Safer Living
- Building Code Requirements
- Safe Rooms and Storm Shelters
- Concrete Masonry
- Tilt-up Concrete
- Removable Forming Systems
- Insulating Concrete Forms
- Local Construction Practices

Who Should Attend: Builders, developers, architects, engineers, contractors, building officials, and product suppliers. The general public is also welcome.

Professional Development Hours: Attendees will receive seven Professional Development Hours. This seminar is registered with AIA Continuing Education System.

Registration: Fee is only $75. Use the registration form on the opposite page to register for the workshops or register online at www.nrmca.org/seminars.
